

ASX Announcement Phoneware Partners with TSA

Tuesday 21st November 2006

Sirius Telecommunications Ltd (ASX:SIU) announced today its wholly owned subsidiary Phoneware Communication Systems Pty Ltd had signed an agreement with TSA Software Solutions to resell its CAAB Call Accounting and Billing software in Australia. TSA was founded in Brisbane in 1994 and Phoneware began in Melbourne in 1986 when it set about building the highly regarded CADS call accounting software that remains current and retains about 40% of the Call Accounting market in Australia today.

The Chairman of Sirius, Roger Mason said that the Phoneware – TSA partnership brought together two pioneering companies of Call Accounting in Australia, each with their own strengths. Phoneware has twenty years of call accounting experience with a large and loyal customer base. TSA is a technically strong software developer constantly upgrading its CAAB software to address the Converged Voice, Data, Mobiles and Carrier needs of organisations in line with the fast changing communications industry in Australia.

Phoneware will continue to market its VXT product, which has been recently upgraded with added features that are tailored to the requirements of the Australian market place. VXT is a popular user-friendly product specialising in converged telephony management and real time monitoring that is being readily accepted by the Industry.

Under the management of recently appointed Sirius Group CEO Frank Licciardello, a new business plan and a new vision for Phoneware has been developed. It covers not only call accounting and converged telephony management but also a complete set of Telecom Expense Management tools and systems. This is provided through the previously announced partnership with Tangoe Inc, a USA based global leader in TEM (Telecom Expense Management) software solutions. The Phoneware business is now positioned in a much larger and growing market, providing ample scope for future organic growth.

Telecommunications costs are a significant part of the cost base of any large corporation and Phoneware, being completely independent of all carriers now has a full suite of tools to offer any company CFO or CIO the confidence that any errors in monthly carrier bills or under utilised and un-necessary telecom services can be quickly identified.

The TSA agreement adds considerable depth to the Phoneware range of Telecom management solutions.
